SCS TODAY: April 22, 2020

[An earlier-than-usual update from the SCS Dean’s Office]

TODAY’S TOPIC

— My thanks to all SCS Administrative Professionals! For your support of faculty, staff, programs and students, please know that we can’t do what we do without you, especially now. My personal gratitude to Lynnetta Miller and Nichole Merritt!

OF NOTE

— The 2020 CMU Symposium on AI and Social Good will be held virtually on Thursday and Friday with an array of exciting programs including four invited talks by CMU faculty members (Rayid Ghani, George Chen, Roni Rosenfeld and Stephen Smith), 18 contributed talks, and 50 spotlight talks on various applications of AI for social good. Register, and plan to attend this 1.5-day symposium via Zoom.

— Or, register for tomorrow’s 11 a.m. "COVID-19 Impacts on the Energy Industry: How can robotics improve energy resilience in a time of crisis?" webinar, the first in a new series and part of the Wilton E. Scott Institute for Energy Innovation’s Earth Week celebration.

TO KNOW

— The latest issue of AI Magazine features a cover story based on the Robotics Institute’s Stephen Smith’s Robert S. Englemore Memorial Lecture in 2018 at the Association for the Advancement of Artificial Intelligence (AAAI) conference.

Until Friday,
----- Martial
